

Take the Pain
Out of Prior Authorizations

Surescripts CompletEPA®

 Physicians spend three to eight hours of time per week to process prior authorizations, costing up to ten thousand dollars per physician per year. Pharmacists experience similar challenges.

 Patients feel the pain of prior authorization too—often waiting multiple days for a response. Twenty to thirty percent of patients give up entirely.

 Other solutions on the market have substituted web portals in place of phone calls and faxes, calling their service electronic prior authorization, but the result isn't any faster for the patient and only marginally better for the physician and pharmacist.

Don't get stuck with an inferior electronic prior authorization solution.
